

Terms of Use for the Contextual Harassment Corpus

We declare the following terms for accessing our contextual Harassment corpus.

- Confidentiality: You cannot send the dataset to any other persons, nor disclose to anyone else the information contained within it– this includes students and researchers. Students and researcher who use this must also contact us and agree to these terms before they can access or use the data. Neither you nor your students can share this dataset with others, please send your requests to mohammadrezarezvan94@gmail.com
- Anonymization: We have anonymized the dataset. You cannot attempt to reverse this by linking individual records with specific users. This also means that you should not link individual data with any other information about an individual that you may have. This implies that you cannot attempt to contact any individuals either. We may eventually release a companion dataset that maps tweets to other identifiers.
- Non-Commercial License: We grant you a non-commercial license to use the data. You can only use it for academic research that does not earn revenue, and your research also cannot be in collaboration with any commercial.

- Citations: If you publish work that uses this dataset, you should cite

Mohammadreza Rezvan, Saeedeh Shekarpour, Lakshika Balasuriya, Krishnaprasad Thirunarayan, Valerie Shalin, Amit Sheth. "Publishing a Quality Context-aware Annotated Corpus and Lexicon for Harassment Research" Submitted to 10th ACM Conference on Web Science, Amsterdam, 27-30 May 2018

Rezvan, Mohammadreza, Saeedeh Shekarpour, Faisal Alshargi, Krishnaprasad Thirunarayan, Valerie L. Shalin, and Amit Sheth. "Analyzing and learning the language for different types of harassment." Plos one 15, no. 3 (2020): e0227330.

- Access to Data: We cannot guarantee continued access to the data, nor that our service will not be interrupted from time to time. The license to use and store our data is recoverable, which means that we may ask you to cease use of it and to delete it from any storage you have at our sole discretion.
- Warranties: We disclaim any warranties, for example but not limited to: the data's suitability for research or publication.
- Other Agreements: Your use of the data should be consistent with any other agreements that may apply to it e.g., 1. Twitter, 2. Applicable data protection laws for your country.

If you agree with all of the above terms, then please sign here:

Name:

Affiliation:

Address:

Signature:

